

LETTER TO OUR READERS

The IJRS (International Journal of Rural Studies), which promotes useful, relevant research into issues and problems that rural people face, is now more than 25 years old. The journal has been filling a vacuum on the international scene and drawing attention to this neglected field for many years.

At present, the IJRS receives subscriptions from a very small number of individuals. For some time, we have been sharing the journal with most of you free of cost. This has only been possible because of the generous support of IVCS (Indian Volunteers for Community Service, U.K.) and the Gramodaya PG College and Research Institute, Amarpurkashi.

Many of you have, in the past, expressed your willingness to support the journal financially. The time has now come when we need your support.

IJRS is a non-profitmaking venture but with the ever increasing costs of printing and postage, it is becoming very difficult to continue unless we get sufficient subscriptions or substantial contributions. Current costs work out at fifty rupees per issue.

Your generous contribution or annual subscription (Rs 100 or £20) will ensure its continued publication. By supporting the journal, you will be part of the movement towards a sustainable development which protects lives, livelihoods and our planet.

We look forward to a positive response.
